Dedication

A native of Weirton, West Virginia, Dr. Anthony G. DiBartolomeo earned both his undergraduate and medical degrees from West Virginia University. In 1976 he joined the WVU Department of Internal Medicine faculty. He has held several positions within that department, most notably Section Chief of Rheumatology since 1982. Dr. DiBartolomeo has demonstrated a genuine interest in teaching medical students and residents. Because of this commitment to teaching he was named Outstanding Teacher, Outstanding Faculty Member, as well as Clinician of the Year on numerous occasions. Serving as Associate Dean for Clinical Affairs within the School of Medicine, Dr. DiBartolomeo has played an instrumental role in shaping the education of medical students and housestaff while overseeing the clinical activities of the Health Science Center.

The 1991 Pylon staff is pleased to dedicate this issue to Dr. Anthony G. DiBartolomeo—clinician, teacher, administrator, politician, Mountaineer, and friend to all.

Thank you, "Dr. D."!

Anthony G. DiBartolomeo, M.D.

Charleston Area Medical Center

Affiliation between WVU Health Sciences Center and Charleston Area Medical Center offers medical students and residents a dynamic educational experience in behavioral medicine and psychiatry, psychiatry/medicine, obstetrics/gynecology, pediatrics/medicine, family practice, internal medicine, pediatrics and surgery. Because we are a 962-bed tertiary care medical center, we offer experience in both private practice and academia -- a valuable balance. Call us for more information. 304-348-4242.

A Place to Grow

Charleston Area Medical Center

Like the community it serves, Charleston Area Medical Center offers residents a diversified and dynamic educational experience. Because we are a 962-bed tertiary care medical center closely affiliated with West Virginia University, we offer experience in both private practice and academia. The Charleston Division of WVU's Health Sciences Center, located on one of three CAMC campuses, houses a fully staffed medical library with one of the largest clinical collections in West Virginia and a computer index to the National Library of Medicine. The dedicated faculty, the diverse settings, the blend of clinical and academic involvement — they will equip you for a challenging future, a successful future.

History Of The Pylons

For nearly four decades the marble pylons that guard the front entrance to the Health Sciences Center have served as a unique symbol of medical education at West Virginia University. In 1954 architect Cyrus Silling chose noted American sculptor Milton Horn to create a visual history of the healing arts for the proposed West Virginia University Medical Center. Horn thoroughly studied the history of medicine for nearly a year, collaborating with his wife Estelle, before selecting 16 milestones in the health sciences. He then produced eight panels depicting important developments and personages in the history of medicine, dentistry, nursing, and pharmacy. The reliefs, installed in October, 1956, remain one of the most distinctive features of the Morgantown campus.

"These works transcend mere illustration," Horn said. "Rather, they portray the spirit. At times one panel symbolizes events that occurred a century or more apart, yet there is a unity in each panel and in all of them together." Horn said that architect Silling proposed the reliefs "because he realized that such a significant building should have art to inspire those who would be using its facilities. Without his inspiration, the great history of health sciences might be unfelt by students except in classroom work."

Reproduced here are photographs and descriptions of the sculptures by Estelle Horn. Milton Horn donated the plaster casts for the pylon panels to West Virginia University as a memorial to his wife, who died in 1975. They are now displayed in the lobby of the Charleston Division of the West Virginia University School of Medicine.

The Apothecary: "And thou shalt make . . . an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary." (Exodus 30:25)

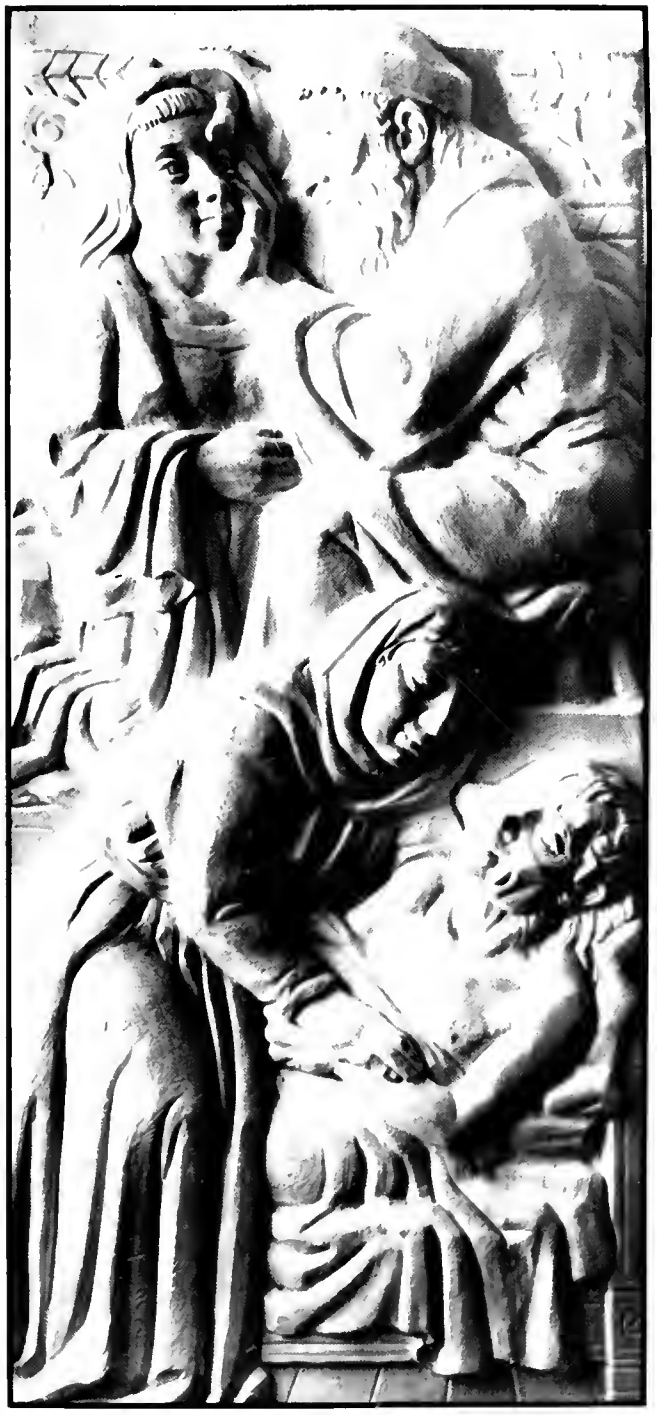
The Old Testament legislated social hygiene for the individual and for the community.

Hippocrates (460-370 BC): The "Father of Medicine", his chief concerns were the patient as well as diagnosis and treatment based on observed facts.

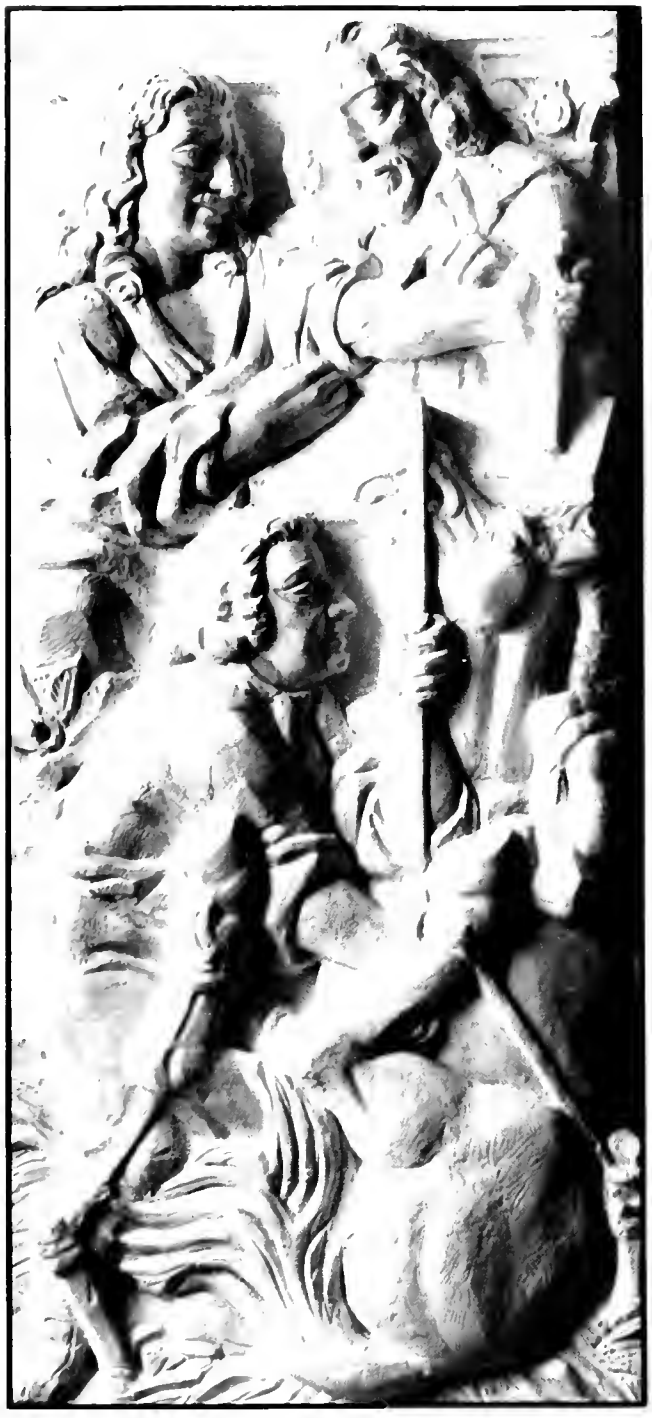
Aristotle (394-322 BC): Comparative anatomist and embryologist

Benvenutus Grassus (circa 12th Century) made studies on the structure of the eye. His writings were the acknowledged text on ophthalmology for nearly 500 years.

A deaconess in a medieval hospital, to quote Castiglioni, carries out "Christianity's essential aim . . . the assistance of the sick . . . a work of human and divine pity."



Dissection and anatomical illustration in the Renaissance when anatomy became a science through dissection of the human corpse. Depicted here is Andreas Vesalius (1514-1564).



William Harvey (1578-1657) discovered the circulation of blood by studying its flow through the veins.

Reverend Stephen Hales (1677-1761) made the first measurement of blood pressure using the direct method on a horse.

Ephraim McDowell (1771-1830), the first physician who surgically removed an ovarian tumor from a patient

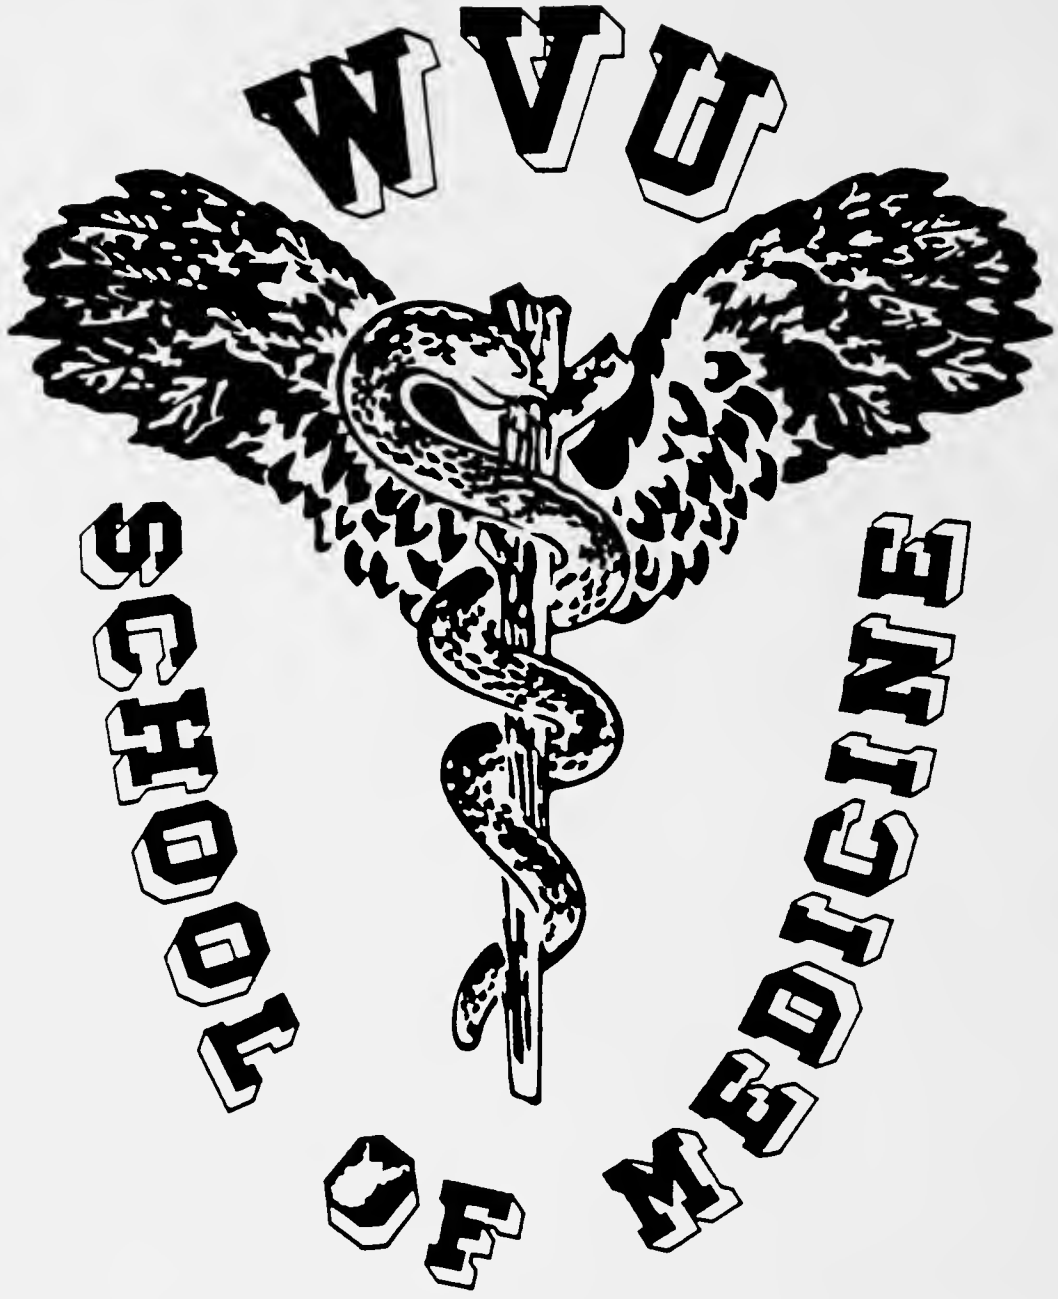
Ignaz Semmelweis (1818-1865) instituted the methods to prevent the spread of childbed fever. He thus saved the lives of countless women.

The development of dentistry as a modern science began with the work of Pierre Fauchard (1678-1761), who is depicted here examining a patient.

Louis Pasteur (1822-1895) inoculates a dog with the rabies virus through a hole bored in the animal's skull as part of an experiment to develop a rabies vaccine.

William Beaumont (1785-1853) advanced physiology by studying the digestive process in the living stomach of a man after a healed shotgun wound left a permanent opening in his side.

Wilhelm Roentgen (1845-1923) discovered the X-ray in 1895. This panel shows the fluoroscope, which allows the examination of the interior of the living body.



CLASS OF 1991

To the Class of 1991:

The progression from student to doctor is one which calls upon every resource a person possesses. One of the real rewards of being a member of the faculty of the School of Medicine is the privilege of working with each class as its members discover new resources within themselves.

I know that each of you can justifiably leave this school with feelings of pride and accomplishment in your own growth. We on the faculty have similar feelings when we recall all that you have done in your time here.

As you embark on your callings, as healers and scientists, you will face challenges to your intellect, your compassion and your spirit. I am confident that the same qualities which you displayed when challenged here will serve you well in the future.

With best wishes,

PROFESSIONAL OATH FOR PHYSICIANS

I swear to fulfill, to the best of my ability and judgement, this covenant:

I will respect the hard-won scientific gains of those physicians in whose steps I walk, and gladly share such knowledge as is mine with those who are to follow.

I will apply, for the benefit of the sick, all measures which are required, avoiding those twin traps of overtreatment and therapeutic nihilism.

I will remember that there is art as well as science to medicine, and that warmth, sympathy, and understanding may outweigh the surgeon's knife or the chemist's drug.

I will not be ashamed to say "I know not," nor will I fail to call in my colleague when the skills of another are needed for a patient's recovery.

I will respect the privacy of my patients, for their problems are not disclosed to me that the world may know.

Most especially must I tread with care in matters of life and death. If it is given me to save a life, all thanks. But it may also be within my power to take a life; this awesome responsibility must be faced with great humbleness and awareness of my frailty. Above all, I must not play God.

I will remember that I do not treat a fever chart, or a cancerous growth, but a sick human being, whose illness may affect his family and his economic stability. My responsibility includes these related problems, if I am to care adequately for the sick.

I will prevent disease whenever I can, for prevention is preferable to cure.

I will remember that I remain a member of society, with special obligations to all my fellow men, those of sound mind and body as well as the infirm.

If I do not violate this oath, may I enjoy life and art, respected while I live and remembered with affection thereafter.

May I always act so as to preserve the finest traditions of my calling, and may I long experience the joy of healing those who seek my help.

Membership Brings It All Together

When you become a member of the West Virginia State Medical Association, you are bound with West Virginia physicians into one influential body. While you remain an individual health care professional, your voice is represented by a group capable of enormous impact. Alone, your voice on issues concerning the medical profession is drowned by larger, more powerful forces. By joining this network of physicians, you gain a partnership in supporting quality medicine, low costs and numerous concerns facing every medical practitioner throughout West Virginia and hold an influential voice with government officials. We present to you this very important step toward health care reform. For more information on membership benefits and functions of the Association, call (304) 925-0342.
